To Whom It May Concern:

I've been curious about Mr. Rhys Davis's candidacy for Grays Harbor County Commissioner so I've gone online to your webpage to see who is contributing to his campaign. Unfortunately, there is very little information there. I checked other local candidates and they seem have been filing correctly.

I reviewed some of the requirements and found Mr. Davis was in violation as required by RCW.42.17. These include:

Late filing:

He announced his candidacy as a Republican on July 17, 2006 but didn't file an updated C-1 until August 28, 2006. It should have been filed on July 31, 2006.

He filed his C-4 on September 7; it was due August 29, 2006. Another was due on September 12, which has not been received.

Missing information:

His initial C-1 Candidate registration did not indicate a reporting method, which is required.

He has not yet chosen a reporting method.

He has not indicated the time frame his C-4 report covers, which is required.

He has not included a Schedule A showing a breakdown of expenses, also required.

He lists only one donor beside himself on his C-4 filed at the end of August. There should definitely be more current information.

In addition, Mr. Davis began spending money on his campaign as early as June 10, when he marched in the Ocean Shores parade as a candidate, distributing candy and displaying signs. He's had flyers printed and additional signs but without a Schedule A to review, it is impossible to know whether these expenditures were reflected in his C-4 report.

All candidates are required to report who contributes to their campaigns and how the money is spent. There can't be exceptions to this. Because of these apparent violations, I am filing this complaint to the Washington State Public Disclosure Commission against Rhys Davis.
